About Camphill Foundation

The Camphill Foundation's work is all about enabling, developing and opening up new potential for people with disabilities.

The Foundation raises funds and provides finance for Camphill Communities, which operate independently in the UK, Ireland and around the world.

The project

Camphill Foundation required a website to help them to communicate to their donors, to promote their work, and to report their many successes.

The website is updated via the Treeline Content Management System, which not only powers the main Foundation website, but can be used to create an unlimited number of wholly independent regional sites at no extra cost. Sites can take donations, build unlimited pages, run blogs and forums, deliver email campaigns to their subscribers, manage interactive maps, and customise the appearance of the site using simple point-and-click interface.

The system is simple to use and needs no technical skills. However, Chameleon Interactive provides full training, plain-English help guides, and supports.

The site exceeds W3C accessibility guidelines, and delivers exceptional SEO, bringing in record numbers of visitors - and opportunities for fundraising.
